BIGGER ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN PLANNED BY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE DIRECTORS

Carnival Dropped This Year, but Publicity Is to Be Taken Up Along Different Line

Comprehensive and systematic advertising of all the various advantages of the Pike's Peak region, on a scale larger than heretofore attempted, is planned by the Chamber of Commerce this year, and at the meeting of the board of directors yesterday, at luncheon at the Alta Vista hotel, consideration was given to the subject of preparing one additional budget to cover these various expenditures.

The Chamber of Commerce believes that this is the logical and psychological time to undertake and carry out a campaign along such lines as will bring results, not only for this year, but in a permanent way for years to come, and its various committees on advertising, conventions, tourist travel, agriculture, statistics and highways, trade and industries and other lines have for several weeks been studying the needs and the most effective means for a work. Reports from these various committees have been filed, and upon this the board of directors is working out a campaign along lines that will be effective.

It is the general opinion that the budget plan, which will do away with a great many miscellaneous subscription campaigns, will be the most popular of the Pike's Peak region, on a scale larger than heretofore attempted, is planned by the Chamber of Commerce directors will submit to the members a such a budget, worked out in detail.

In this connection, consideration has been given to the question as to the continuation of the Pike's Peak region, as expressed at yesterday's meeting, that the carnival, for the year 1914, be not carried out. The carnival will be taken up another year, and it is not improbable that some form of celebration or entertainment for tourists and residents, but along less elaborate lines, will be arranged for this summer.

Efforts will be concentrated along such lines as will advertise not only the summer resort features, but winter climate and advantages as well. Attention will be given to the agricultural opportunities, the Pike's Peak region for industry and trade, securing and caring for convention visitors, and development of tourist travel with particular emphasis on Texas, Oklahoma, and the southwestern states. Complete plans for this work will be presented within a few days.

SOCIETY RUN SURE TO DOOM ENTIRE REGION

Auto Trip to Texas Over New Route
Will Do Much to Advertise
Colorado Springs

The proposal of staging a sociability run over the Colorado-to-the-Gulf highway from Colorado Springs to Galveston is daily growing in favor with the business men all along the route, and the Chamber of Commerce and professional men of this city have already promised to make the trip. The run will be made some time in May, the fourth of that month having been set as the date temporarily.

Letters from Texas arrive at the local Chamber of Commerce rooms daily, stating that the people of the various towns along the highway are anxiously awaiting the arrival of the Colorado-to-the-Gulf auto club, according to those interested in the run here, but that the trip will do much to advertise the Pike's Peak region and Colorado in general among the people of Texas.

The personnel of the party, which will start on the run from Pueblo and Trinidad is practically settled. It is the desire of those in charge here to have at least 25 of the prominent business and representative men of the city make the trip.

One reason for making the trip, of course, is to advertise the Colorado-to-the-Gulf highway as a means of entrance to the Pike's Peak region and Colorado from the Lone Star state. The importance of this route has already been recognized locally, and which is expected of it this season is a tourist highway, that is shown is not a new thing talked about in the fact that a full page advertisement showing a map of the route will appear in the Automobile Blue Book of Chicago for 1914.

DAN CRAWFORD, AFTER 22 YEARS IN AFRICAN JUNGLE, SEES CIVILIZATION--AND WONDER

People of Today Leave Much to Be Desired,
Says Second Stanley; Will Never Return

Civilized people of the twentieth century, when you first meet them after an uninterrupted absence of over 22 years in the heart of the African jungle, leave much to be desired and the natives along the shores of Lake Mweru are more advanced in their way of life, in the opinion of Dr. Dan Crawford, who two years ago emerged from the heart of the dark continent for the first time since 1892. Dr. Crawford is on a world lecture tour, preceding his retirement in the jungle where he purposes to spend the rest of his life in the missionary work he has been doing so successfully. He lectured at the First Presbyterian church yesterday afternoon and again last night.

One: we kill only criminals, and instead of being ashamed you cross the sea to come and tell it."

"Do not think I apologize for God's sin, and it is sin. The gospel of God is what we need and what they need. The night cometh when no man can work."

Dr. Crawford deplores the coming of the whites into Zululand, attracted there by its tremendous deposits of valuable copper ore. He rails them intruders and says they will work his blacks the same harm that the intermingling of whites and blacks in the United States has caused.

The native in this country, he says, is a real native. He can be only satisfied for both blacks and whites while the negro is allowed to live anywhere but by himself in an isolated community.

Dr. Crawford is a member of the Royal Geographical society, and authorities state that he knows more about the natives of Africa than any other man. He was the author of the new "Horn of Africa" book, "Living Black." His trip to America is to take him with which to establish schools in his adopted country Zululand, Central Africa. A school for his people costs $1000 and already he has raised money enough to found several institutions.

So exclusively has he associated with the natives that Dr. Crawford now thinks in Bantu, which he claims is a far more elastic language with its 25 tenses and 19 genders than English. Instead of 24 letters, the Bantus have 60. Into this language the missionary has translated the Bible, creating for the purpose a written form which the natives did not have. Although Dr. Crawford thinks in Bantu he writes and speaks in most vigorous English.

"Missionary work is hard, but there is a great glory in going without luxuries and necessities," he said. "I could tell you the romance of a pair of shoes that came to me in my need in the heart of the jungle, Elijah's God is not powerless now."

Then there is the great law of compensation. The natives have no note books, but they have wonderful memories. I visit them once in 10 years and for word can repeat my sermon word for word, so keen is their memory. They have no artificial light, they call such lighting lightning God's light, they think he has drawn down the blinds for them to go to sleep, but they have instead most wonderful eyes.

"They have no shoes. David Livingstone, who first came among them with boots is called all over Africa. Mr. He Hath No Shoes. But their 10 toes are so strong they can trust them where I with my boots dare not go. God compensates us in his own way."

"Civilization is creeping up toward them from the south, where it means mines and liquor and sadness. When told my native friends, as I left the head of the railroad, of all your wonders today, traveling in and under the earth and water, and tried to impress them with these modern improvements they said, Better off is not to be better."

"In that is a whole system of ethics. They know the immortality of the soul; it is not even questioned from one coast to the other, with them the body is but the cottage of the soul, death is not departing, but arriving. God is his own pioneer, and in the heart of Africa, black heathen Africa, he had preceded us, and there everything tells of him."

"Cannibalism? Oh, to be sure. It is not nice. I make no apology for it. But try for a moment to think black with me. Come and let us tell some of these cannibal people that in the Balkans white men fought till 4000 were killed on one side and 5000 on the other, and he will cry out in horror. Oh, venom of the serpent who slays, and not to eat."

War Versus Cannibalism.

"Murder is not very pretty anywhere, and what is done with the flesh afterward is not the only point worth considering. After all, when you read of war between white men, how much do they lack of being cannibals?"

"Even our most glorious message is the taunt of the black man. Once when I was telling the story of the cross, a chief named Molemba interrupted me saying, You white men are a lot. You had the cross."

Decision of Moose Supreme Council Is Expected Tomorrow

Members of the local Loyal Order of Moose lodge, men of the Chamber of Commerce and citizens in general are awaiting the early news of the decision of the Supreme Council of the lodge, which is meeting in San Francisco to take action on the selection of a site for the proposed national Moose sanatorium. The committee went into session yesterday, but nothing definite as to its actions could be learned up to a late hour last night.

The special committee which visited this city several days ago visited 80 cities and kindred days from each to present to the supreme council. In light of this it is probable the council will require several days to look over and consider the information presented, and its decision may not be expected for several days, at least.

However, there have been positive assurances that the committee will make a final decision at its meeting in San Francisco. The committee is expected to select a site for the location of the sanatorium has been well presented to the council, both by the local Moose members and the Chamber of Commerce. A comprehensive letter on climatic, railroad and other conditions was forwarded to the council some time ago by Secretary A. W. Henderson. In addition to this information a portfolio of mounted photographs of the region and Glen Eyrie was also sent. In fact, everything possible has been done to secure favorable consideration for this plan.

TAXPAYERS LEAGUE WILL INVESTIGATE SINGLE TAX

A taxpayers' league is the plan on foot among the various improvement societies in order that the single tax plan, which will undoubtedly be submitted to voters next November, can be thoroughly investigated. A joint committee has already been named from the various improvement societies to consider the present tax problem and the single tax plan, and according to several members, it will be merged into a central organization. These societies have not come out in favor of the single tax, and they state that when the plan carried in Pueblo the people were unfamiliar with the method.

The league, it is understood, will be nonpartisan and permanent and will take up tax matters from time to time in the future.

PAPER DRINKING CUPS
SAVE MELON CROP
SAN FRANCISCO, March 13.—The discovery by a farmer that paper drinking cups placed over young cantaloupe plants furnished admirable protection from severe weather is said to be largely responsible for the bumper crop the Imperial valley expects to produce this season.

Widespread use of the cups not only has advanced the crop, it is said, but has made the yield much heavier than in former years. The crop, which will be shipped to market beginning about May 20 is estimated at 1,433,500 crates, which will require $800 cars to move.

Eczema Gone! ACNE, Tetter, Rash, Pimples, Carbuncles, Boils Carished!

It is certainly remarkable how quickly the action of S. S. S. the famous blood purifier, shows itself in the skin.

There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which peculiarly stimulates cellular and glandular activity to select from the blood, or from the fine network of blood vessels in the skin those elements which it requires for regeneration.

Thus pimples, acne, eczema, lupus, and any other blood condition, that attacks the skin or seeps an outlet through the skin is met with the most effective effect.

This is why skin troubles vanish so readily and why they do not return. Under the influence of S. S. S. the network of blood vessels in the skin is constantly selecting from the blood the nutrition required for healthy tissue, and the cause of disease is just as constantly being removed, scattered and rendered harmless.

It is a great mistake to rely on cathartics, or purgatives, or other facial, eruptions. Not only do they do no good, but they thin the blood of its valuable and useful constituents.

It will be surprised and delighted at the effect of S. S. S. in the skin is quick and reliable.

Sunday School Lesson and Young People's Topics

RE-ADJUSTING THE SOCIAL DAY

The International Sunday School Lesson for March 15 is "The Lawful Use of the Sabbath."—Luke 13:10-17; 14:1-6.

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

The old order changeth, yielding place to new; And God fulfills himself in many ways. Least one good custom should corrupt the world.

—Tennyson.

Go on, along with the broad-brimmed hats and knee breeches, is the Sabbath. Nobody used work, anybody it never was a particularly scriptural thing. At Lord's day. For it is the best of the most perfect of problems in American church life today. The Sabbath of the olden time of the Christian Sunday, which is really a social institution, should be determined by purpose, and not by drift. Certainly the good folk who seem willing to let the day become wholly secular if it cannot be kept in the fashion of their ancestors are adding nothing to the solution of the difficulty.

The best authority to consult in this crisis is not the "dread business" but the far-seeing, ever-wise and divinely-authorized. There is a humanist. A candid consideration of his practices and words reveals a clear path out of the perplexity which is afflicting Christians in this Twentieth century.

The old Jewish doctors of the law elaborated the ritual of Sabbath-keeping to the point of absurdity. A Jew could not catch a flea upon his person on the Sabbath, as this was a kind of hunting. The distance he might travel, and the partition he might pass, were reduced to an exact tabulation. Rigid observance of the letter of the day led to a thousand practices, under the Mosaic law, to suffer death, rather than fight on the Sabbath.

Getting ahead of all this man-made ritualism was the radical declaration of Jesus that "the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath." That meant liberty. It released the benighted people from the yoke of a man-made law, and set them free to do the good work of the highest welfare of man. For a yoke of oppression, but a character of liberty and helpfulness, was his best of days, the memorial of his relation to God. No Sabbath is left which is observed in a spirit of hardship, restraint and joylessness. The Sabbath is a glad day, a day of rest, a day for living up and for living down, a day for developing the Godward aspect of human life.

The "Go-to-Church" idea.

A really organized enterprise for a "Go-to-Church" Sunday has been set on foot. Great cities and small villages have entered into the plan, showing a vast ability and resourcefulness for propaganda that is notable. The advertising of the church has become a new movement in the present day. All this is helping the world to perceive anew the profound considerations which underlie church attendance. Here we find, in the story which is the story of Jesus in the church of his day. That was his practice. He stood for the best evidence of organic religion in his time. He found a fault with some of its shortcomings, but he stood by it. He saw the Van-va point of its service, he perceived a nobler type of worship. Nobody can find words or words of example of the Master for spending all of Sunday on the golf links or in automobile or in putting about a game. He was found at the side of those who met for the worship of God on the Sabbath. That is the ideal testimony anybody can offer to the church; lack of it nullifies all other witness. Despite all he may say, the churchman goes to the side of God and religion.

The Boardman, Rochester.

Our own day's deep social sense is finally buttressed in the practice and teachings of Jesus. He put human welfare above ritual. Churchly etiquette went less to him than the well-being of living men and women. His conception of the Sabbath was of a day that is beautiful in ministry to man. Tradition counted for nothing, as against helpfulness. Our own Sunday should be a day so helpful to all sides of man's nature that it will bind society together by a powerful spiritual tie.

The aristocratic ecclesiasticalism of Christ's time had ritualized religion to death. The minute matters of rites and ceremonies and prescriptions and regulations had displaced the essential spirit of the wholesome law of Jesus. Of course, their successors are with us today, as they have been in every generation. The minutiae of altar cloths and altar trimmings, whether prayers shall be read from a book or uttered extemporaneously, whether the minister shall wear a gown or display his own tailor's wares, such minor matters as these have always shown a tendency to assume major importance in organized institutionalized religion. Conformity to these nonessentials has often been made a test of orthodoxy. Then along comes the reformer, with the vital word and the vital deed and the ecclesiastical are scandalized, while the people rejoice.

So it was in this story. Jesus smashed into atoms the finely spun ritualism of the Pharisees by healing a sick woman on the Sabbath in the synagogue. How he loved people and sought to help them! Over against the human need, the rules of the church party, religious having and, moreover, to their utter confusion, Jesus proved from their own deliverance that this wild, helpful, social and really religious ink on the Sabbath was entirely right.

Taking a "Dare."

Anybody who put the letter of the law, or his own ritual, in the way of the people's welfare could be sure of a searching opinion from the gentle Jesus. These simple, self-righteous, man-oppressing Pharisees moved him to deep indignation. Like a whistling, stinging lash he excoriated them with "Ye hypocrites!" With biting sarcasm, he convicted them out of their own rigidity. They provided mercy for a dumb beast on the Sabbath, the mercy which they denied to a child of Abraham.

Twice, in this lesson portion, Jesus broke the man-made traditions concerning the Sabbath, in order to heal the suffering. The first act was the woman in the synagogue. The second was a man with the dropsy. In the case of a Pharisee. This latter seems to have been in the nature of a trap laid for Jesus. The Pharisees, who were always ready to find fault with the whole occasion was elaborately staged. Here was the background of ecclesiastical ritualism. In front stood the sick man, in clear view of the Guest from Nazareth. The whole occasion was one great question, "Now do you dare do it?"

Nobody spoke. But the question that was in everybody's eyes, and on everybody's lips, Jesus fearlessly faced, and answered by one of his own penetrating queries, which so often confounded his critics. "Is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath, or not?"

The dare was answered. So Jesus healed the sufferer, and let him go, flinging at his accusers the whole, a hypothetical question from their own regulations which confounded them and justified him: "Which of you shall have an ass or an ox fallen into a well, and will not straightaway draw him up on a Sabbath day?"

More pertinent and suggestive than the putting to shame of his adversaries by Jesus is the record, "The multitude rejoiced." The crowd cares little for precedent; human helpfulness means much to it. The man with a vital message that works out in life may have the resistance of the people. The Sabbath that honors God by serving the highest—which is the spiritual welfare of man—is the sort of Sabbath the people welcomed and Christ proclaimed.

THE REAL STOREHOUSE OF WEALTH.

Terse Comments on the Young Prayer Meeting Topic of the Young People's Societies Christian Endeavor, etc. for March 15 "Well Stored Memories."—1 Cor. 15:1-10.

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

"What do you do all day?" a visitor asked a rustic, sitting on a fence, and smoking his corn-cob pipe. "Well, sometimes I sit here and think, and sometimes I 'jest' at."

The fact is not often so badly stated that some persons "jest" at, without any intellectual resources whatever. Possessed of abundant leisure, the treasure which the philosopher covets most, they have not the power to utilize it. Their minds are empty of information worth while. They have barren intellectual barren. And this is the poverty that impoverishes a nation far more than financial stringency or economic calamity. The wealth of a country is in people whose brains are well stored, well trained, and well used.

Who remembers what was the most popular novel 15 years ago? It is forgotten, and of its residuum there is scarcely a trace. Not so with the great books. They abide. Their characters, their philosophy, their sayings, permanently enrich the mind. Ergo, we should be at least hasty to read the latest "best-seller" and give more heed to the literature that time has tested.

A striking magazine poem appeared a few years ago, wherein the writer exulted in his daily ride in the roaring subway train as his hour alone with God. That man made the highest use of an unemployed hour. He might have spent his time in idly staring at the other passengers, or in doing the advertisements instead, he drew into a world apart, where, as Milton says:

"The mind is its own place, And it can make a heaven of hell."

Only the full mind has room for the habitation of a personality. The empty brain must seek diversion in mere things. It must be amused, for it cannot entertain itself. For the well-stored mind there are no lonely periods. Opportunity for contemplation is welcomed. A desert ride is transformed from memory's etc. garden of poetry and wisdom. An illness is a time for luxuriating in the accumulated treasures of the mind. Whatever befalls the person whose own mind is richly endowed, merely gives him opportunity to draw upon his wealth. "That is why," imprisonment and banishment have often been turned to the world's advantage. For

"Stone walls do not a prison make, Nor iron bars a cage."

If any young person has the foresight to consider seriously what deposits he will make in the bank of memory, he is already sure to discover that the return is a high rate of interest as positions of scripture. A mind stored with Bible truth possesses a wealth in life wherein this knowledge does not serve one helpfully.

Youth is the time to lay in this store of the Word that bears fruit in life. As the Psalmist, "My Word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee."

A well-filled mind is more than a reservoir; it is a spring, from which a constant refreshment is drawn when ever put into it.

"Knowledge is power," said Bacon. It is fact, and more. Knowledge is life's window for outlook. Knowledge is a bond of fellowship. Knowledge is preparation. Knowledge is discipline. Knowledge reacts on life in every phase and aspect. And, to a teachable mind, to get knowledge is to get wisdom.

Never a fact, a fragment of literature or a truth can be planted in the mind without germinating, and some day bringing forth its own particular fruit.

As a boy empties his pockets and counts over his treasures, so the person whose mind is well-stored may know

Helen Demorel and Goddard sought a quiet cafe. Soon they were in a quaint private dining room overlooking the sinuous waters of the Seine.

Helen was very seductive that evening. Her filmy satin gown half revealed and half suggested the subtle contour of her body. Her uncovered shoulders glistened in the rosy light of the candlelight. Her fine features were accentuated by delicate pencilings about her eyes and the merest touch of carmine applied to her cheeks.

A dapper little short-legged waiter tripped in and waited.

"Two Creme d'Velvet," Goddard ordered.

"Helen," he breathed passionately, "may that you love me and that you will marry me!"

There was a silence. The amorous strains of the "Kreutzer Sonata" were wafted to them. "I wish to God I had never seen you," Goddard added despairingly.

"I don't, my beloved," the girl returned, her eyes in his.
